

Chris Powell is a man for hire which means that as long as the price is right, committing a crime ranging from a simple burglary, right up to an assassination is well within his realms of expertise. Normally when it's a killing, he's given the name of the target along with and up to date photo and in which country in the world they can be found. On this occasion the rules have had to be changed and he will have to turn detective if he intends to find who he is looking for. He will have to follow a sparse trail of bread crumbs to lead him from one suspect to another where he will have to use whatever means necessary to glean every snippet of information out of them to help him find out who the next person up the ladder is. Unfortunately for him, the police are also looking for these people and the last thing he wants to do is to cross swords with them as keeping his identity and his line of work a secret is paramount if he wants to continue working this way. If he is successful he will earn lots of money but if he fails then he could lose his anonymity or even his life!
